

About Living Language

Our language programmes were pioneered in the early eighties and have consistently achieved excellent results to date. The principal aim is to improve the participant's knowledge of the language. Also, and of equal importance, studying and living with foreign students make learning a truly enriching cultural experience.

Our 38 years of experience show that Irish students are often upgraded in their French, Spanish or German classes on returning to Ireland.

'Michael John Murphy admits that on his first day alone aged 15 in a French boarding school in Le Mans, "I was in the toilet crying, calling my parents" on a mobile phone he had smuggled in. Like his two sisters before him, he was spending transition year in France because their mother, Barbara Murphy, believed it was beneficial not only for their language skills but also for their personal development. He enrolled as a weekly boarder and spent the weekends in Paris with the family of another boy at the school. The daily regime involved lessons – all through French – from 8.30am to 5pm and then at least two hours of evening study before going to the dorms at 9pm and lights out at 10.30pm. Director Jean-Marc Bourguignon stressed that preparation is key for success. There is an enrolment test to determine abilities, briefing of parents and child, and then a language crash course before leaving Ireland. On arrival, there is a four-day preparatory course for the small group of teenagers who have travelled with Bourguignon from Ireland before they are placed individually in different, usually private schools, where they either board or live with a family vetted by the school.'

« De prochains bacheliers irlandais en séjour linguistique dans des institutions privées de Laval et Mayenne, sous la responsabilité de Jean-Marc Bourguignon et Patrick Deprez de Living Language de Dublin, ont été heureux de pratiquer leur sport favori face à l'équipe liffréenne. La rencontre arbitrée par Philippe Cornilleau a tourné à l'avantage de celle-ci: les visiteurs n'ayant pas de chaussures à crampons... »
